The pix'L microcannula is an innovative tool designed specifically for use with the Restylane® range of dermal fillers. In comparison to a traditional needle based treatment, the pix'L microcannula is a blunt cannula which does not cut through the tissue but glides gently along the natural fibres below the skin and hardly damages the blood vessels, resulting in minimal bruising or swelling during the treatment. Multiple treatment areas can be reached through one access point, creating even less potential for bruising.

In contrast to the conventional anti-wrinkle injections which are frequently carried out today with a sharp needle, the blunt alternative, the Pix'L™ microcannula, offers a number of advantages: fewer tissue injuries, reddening or bruises, hardly any downtime and above all a precise treatment result as the Restylane dermal filler is distributed equally when injected with the blunt cannula.

Dr Grant is trained in the use of the cannula delivery system. This ensures Restylane can be delivered with minimal bruising and discomfort. Limited down time maximum line reduction.
